

its discovery, including trying on over thirty other dresses, and a fortunately-timed decision of the store to discontinue the style, landing it luckily in Josey's price range. Jorge was dapper and classy in his black-tie tuxedo from Suits Unlimited (also in Albuquerque), which he felt needed an additional splash of fun added... "He added Super Mario cufflinks!" the bride laughs.

Little did this special couple know, a dance they had choreographed together years prior became the foundation of the first dance at their wedding. "We hadn't danced as much in recent years because of Covid," recalls the bride, "but Jorge and I have been dancing bachata, salsa, and country swing together for over 4 years. Finally being able to practice and dance together again was one of my favourite parts of the wedding."

From using "Forever and Always" from the Swan Princess for the bridal procession (the bride's favourite film when she was little), to her brother's partner accompanying the DJ with her violin, to the groom and groomsmen being able to get ready in the ranch's epic games room: the couple's wedding was filled with touching, memory-making moments that made the day even more special. Following their wedding, the couple whisked themselves away to Maui for their summer honeymoon, and are planning on Acadia National Park for the autumn, Germany over Christmas, and Japan for the following Spring. "We plan to treat the rest of our lives together as a permanent honeymoon."
